

Tropical Storm Isaac Heads towards the Gulf of Mexico

Tropical storm Isaac swept across southern Florida on Sunday and headed towards the Gulf of Mexico, where it is expected to intensify over the warm water. According to the National Hurricane Center, Isaac is expected to intensify by mid-week to a category 2 hurricane with sustained winds of 105 miles per hour. States of emergency were declared in Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi while a hurricane warning was issued for northern Gulf Coast from Louisiana to the Florida Panhandle. Meanwhile, residents in the low-laying areas in Alabama State have been evacuated.
