

A Series of Earthquakes Struck South-west China

The quakes quivered the border of Yunnan and Guizhou Provinces at 11:19 Beijing time. The two strongest quakes were measured at 5.6 magnitude by The US Geological Survey. Local officials have confirmed that all deaths were from Yiliang County of Yunnan Province. The occurrences have left more than 43 people dead and 150 injured, while thousands have been evacuated. Meanwhile, at least 20,000 were damaged among other losses.