

Earthquakes Struck Indonesia

Two earthquakes, scaled 5.5 and 5.7, struck northern Sumatra in the morning of June 13th. The quakes also cast influence on the territory of Malaysia, raising anxiety among the residents. Affecting regions such as Malacca Straights, Selangor, Perak, and Malacca State, the occurrence caused no tsunami alarm, and none of the affected regions had casualties reported.

The shake still raised discussion over evacuation conduct and response to earthquakes among the areas.
