

Wild Fire Struck Southwestern US

Up to present, critical wildfire originated from Arizona State has lasted for 20 days and burned at least 0.2 million acres of land, affecting 7 states in total. So far the conflagration has destroyed more than 40 homes and urged at least 10 thousand residents in several townships to be evacuated. Over 3,500 firefighters have endeavored to extinguish the fire and could finally catch a small break as the condition gets under control after the extremity on Sunday, June 19. Drought as well as distinctive heat and strong wind this year are all regarded as major causes of the wildfire although human factors are still in consideration according to the responding agencies.