

Earthquake Hit South-west China

An earthquake shook the ground of Yun-Nan Province, South-west China, in the evening of June 20. The US Geological Survey (USGS) located the epicenter of the 5.3 quake about 2,500 kilometers from the capital Beijing. The government of Yun-Nan Province has confirmed at least two cases of injury and several houses brought down by the occurrence.